

CHILDHOOD BEREAVEMENT CHANGEMAKER (CBC) INITIATIVE REQUEST FOR PROPOSAL

The Childhood Bereavement Changemaker Initiative is an evaluation capacity building program that was developed by Judi's House/JAG Institute in partnership with the New York Life Foundation to support agencies in understanding and using data to strengthen services for bereaved children and families.

The Childhood Bereavement Changemaker (CBC) initiative allows participating organizations access to a unique, sequenced, evaluation training model. The model includes interactive workshops, expert consultation, program evaluation resources and templates, and peer networking. After fully engaging in this learning process, organizations will be equipped with data to inform planning, influence change, increase funding, and enhance overall impact—ultimately ensuring bereaved children in their community have the care they need.

Selected Childhood Bereavement Changemakers (Changemakers) will participate in a series of four two-hour workshops in preparation for completing capacity building activities and templates. Between workshops, Changemakers will participate in group and individual technical assistance sessions with the Judi's House/JAG team to support these activities. A Readiness Assessment will estimate each interested applicant's current evaluation capacity. Changemakers will become part of our extended alumni network. This network of partners and collaborators supports organizations tackling similar obstacles to create a broad learning community dedicated to elevating evaluation practice and data utilization in the field. Offered at no cost to participants, the initiative provides selected Changemakers unparalleled support and continuing education credits where applicable.

Selected Changemakers will receive:

- Access to and support utilizing the CBC Program Evaluation Online Workbook of resources and templates to support best-practice evaluation implementation
- Collaboration with the experienced Judi's House/JAG Institute Team of evaluation researchers
- Access to Judi's House/JAG Institute resources and networks
- Meeting coordination and forum for Changemaker Learning Community
- Four Evaluation Workshops
- Four group assistance sessions
- Hands-on learning through individual assistance sessions

- Practical recommendations
- Connection and engagement with local and national partners in the childhood bereavement field
- Identification as a partner in the Childhood Bereavement Changemaker Initiative

Judi's House/JAG anticipates engaging one Changemaker Cohort each year. Cohort engagement will be as follows:

April 2024–March 2025

March 2025–February 2026

March 2026–February 2027

March 2027–February 2028

Judi's House/JAG will post a Changemaker Request for Proposal (RFP) each year in November for organizations interested in participating in the following year's March cohort start.

In addition to the CBC Initiative, Judi's House/JAG Institute offers a series of free evaluation trainings in partnership with the National Alliance for Children's Grief (NACG). These trainings are an alternative resource for organizations who cannot dedicate sufficient time to the year-long CBC initiative. The evaluation training series is a great way to begin building evaluation capacity.

This RFP is for the April 2024 – March 2025 Childhood Bereavement Changemaker cohort. Organizations committed to growing their evaluation capacity to elevate childhood bereavement with the necessary time and resources to dedicate to the CBC process should review the entire RFP and submit a completed application online† no later than 5 pm MDT on Friday, March 1, 2024.

†Only Childhood Bereavement Changemaker Applications submitted online will be considered.

Benefits for Changemakers

- Strengthen understanding of evaluation planning and implementation, data collection, and data utilization

What Changemakers Will Receive

Training and consultative program valued at over $60,000 to include:

- Interactive workshops
- Evaluation workbook – resources and templates to support best practice program evaluation
- Evaluation assistance alongside other Changemakers

- Individual assistance, including review of Changemaker-developed evaluation tools
- Practical recommendations
- Meeting coordination and forum provided for Changemaker Learning Community

What the Changemaker Initiative is Not

- A chance to obtain an already-created evaluation protocol and data collection tools for your organization to adopt
 - Instead, it is an opportunity to refine or develop new tools in collaboration with experts at Judi's House/JAG Institute based on your organization's evaluation goal/questions and your specific program
 - Your team will build capacity, with support from the Judi's House/JAG Institute team, to develop evaluation questions to guide your program evaluation effort and data collection tools to complement your program and participants
 - There is not a one-size-fits-all solution in program evaluation. This initiative involves learning alongside other organizations working in the family bereavement field who are invested in improving their evaluation practices and utilizing data to drive decisions, improve programming, and increase funding towards sustainability.
- The CBC Initiative is not a certificate program
 - Changemakers will have the opportunity to earn continuing education credits for counseling or social work

EVALUATION READINESS¹

To help assess your readiness for evaluation, rate your organization to the best of your ability using the scale below. The assessment results will help the Judi's House/JAG Institute Team understand your organization's current needs in evaluation capacity building.

- Ratings:
- 1: Not at all True
 - 2: Somewhat True
 - 3: Very True

1. Program Goals Identified

Organization has program goals and objectives.

Program descriptions are consistent and clear.

Program activities align to the organization's mission.

Organization has documentation that outlines program model, which may be a logic model, work plan and/or program planning and evaluation model.

2. Measurable Outcomes

Organization has clear measurable outcomes that align to the mission statement.

All staff are aware of these measurable outcomes.

These outcomes identify what change is expected to occur, in what way, and with what group(s).

Example: More than half of program participants show improvements in grief-related symptoms.

3. Data Collection Tools

Organization has data collection tools that measure the outcomes. This may include intake forms, surveys, focus group question guides, and other methodologies.

4. Data Collection Process

Organization has at least one staff member charged with overseeing all data collection efforts. A third-party evaluator may also be involved.

Data collection protocol is established.

Data collectors are trained.

Written documentation about data collection process, confidentiality, and data security is in place.

5. Data Management

Organization has a data management system in place.

There is a process to enter data (if collected on paper).

There is a database that can be managed internally or externally.

There is a codebook to ensure data are managed in a consistent manner.

There is a data management training for staff and/or volunteers.

6. Data Analysis and Reporting

Organization has identified parties that have the time and skills to analyze data and synthesize into a meaningful report.

7. Communicate Data

There is a clear communications plan of how evaluation reports will be shared with different groups, such as funders, participants, staff, board members, and the community at large (if applicable).

8. Usage of Data

Organization uses data for continuous program improvement as well as accountability to key stakeholders.

There is a culture of evaluative thinking, where data-based decision making is integrated into the organization's culture.

By submitting the completed Childhood Bereavement Changemaker Application, the organization agrees to contribute all investments, meet all requirements, and abide by all timelines outlined in the Childhood Bereavement Changemaker Request for Proposal.
